Once upon time, there was an eleven years old girl named Elsa who lived in Hawaii, in a big house with a garden and a pool.

Elsa wanted to make a big party on Saturday, so she asked her parents if she could do so and invite all her friends.

Her parents accepted under the condition that the house must stay clean and the party must be held under their supervision. Elsa accepted and was very happy.

Next day, Elsa's parents received an invitation card to attend an honoring ceremony at work.

The invitation was from their boss, so they had to go.

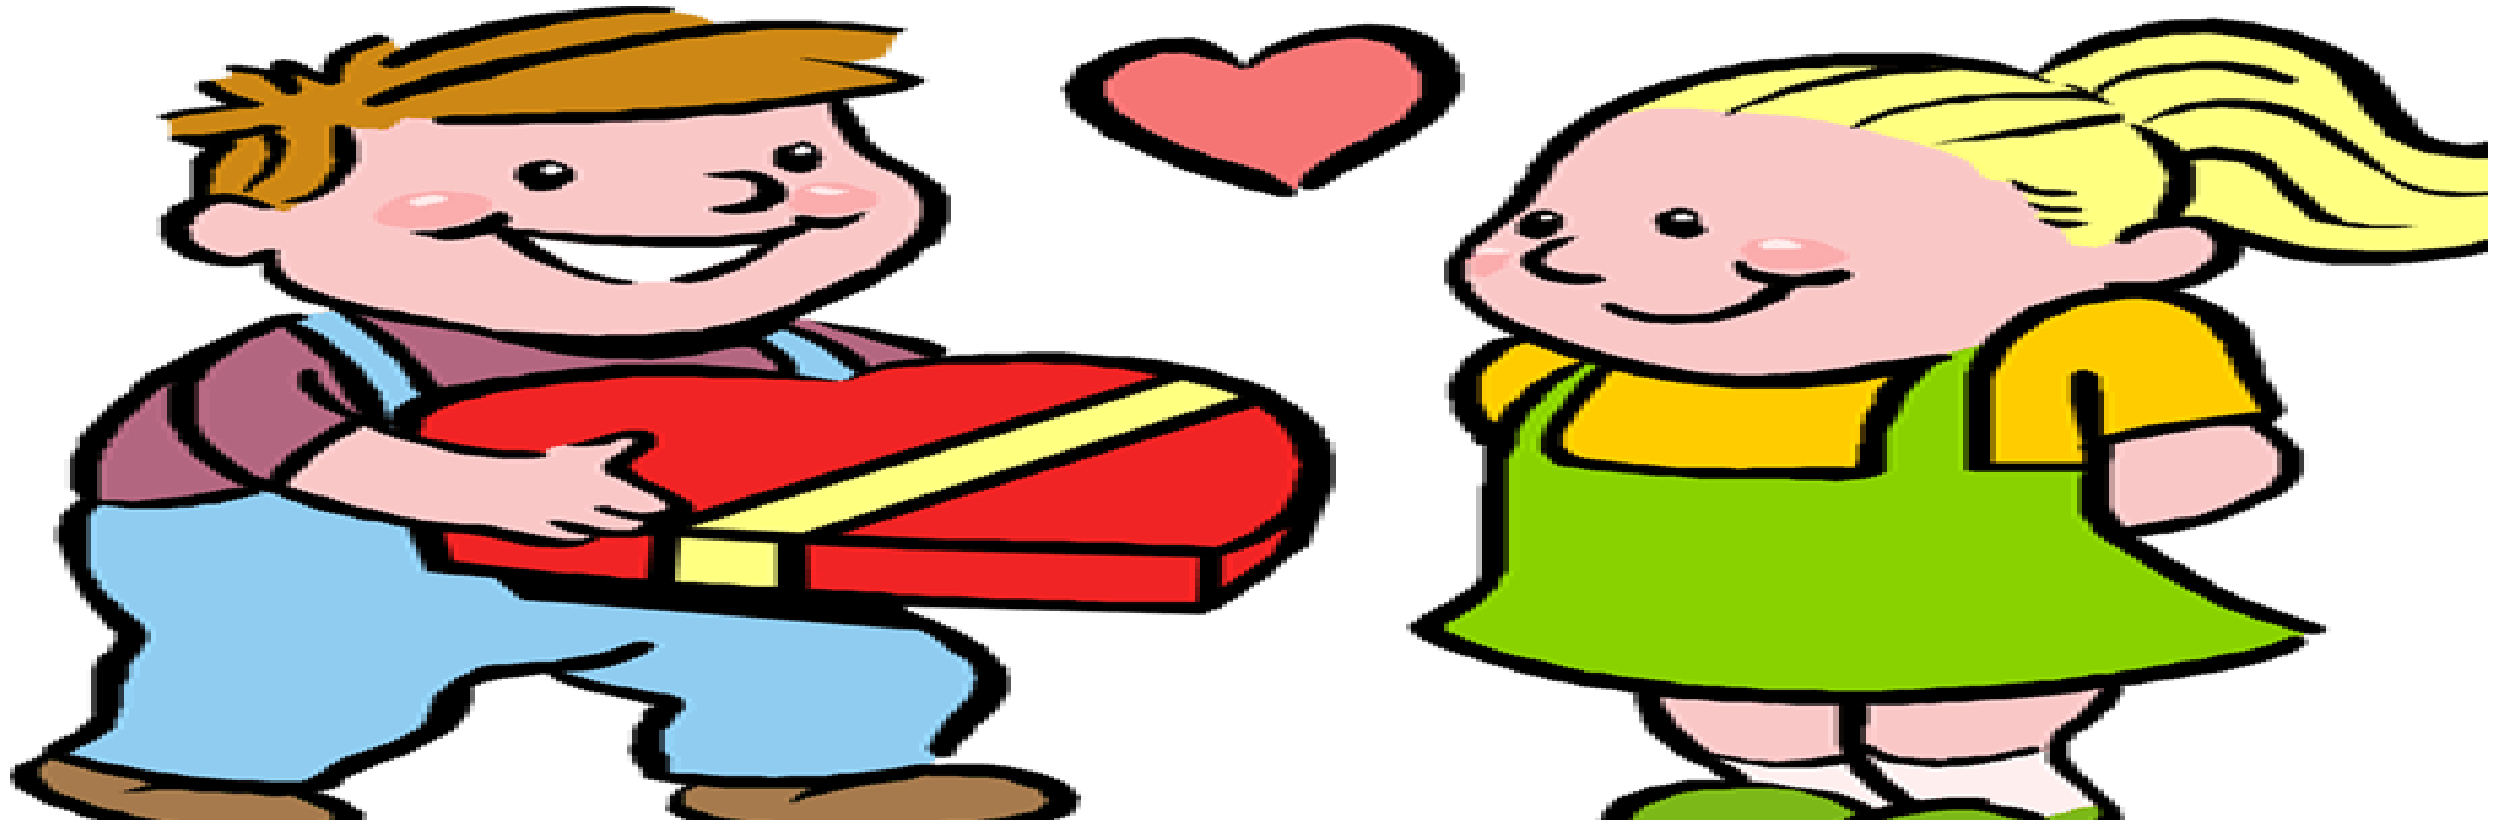

They immediately told Elsa that she must cancel her party and take care of her little brother because they are leaving on Saturday.

Elsa felt sad and she didn't want to cancel her party so that her friends won't call her a party pooper.

she started to think for a solution to hold the party.

Elsa decided to make the party without her parents' approval.

On Saturday, Elsa waited for her parents to go out so that she can bring cake, juice and some chocolate to bribe her little brother in order not to tell his parents about the party.

The party started and all Elsa's friends came. They started to play, eat and dance. They were very happy in the party.

After one hour Elsa's friends started to ruin the house and the mess was all over the place. Chocolate was on the floor, they threw juice on the couch and broke her mom's favorite vase that she brought all the way from India and it was so expensive.

Elsa went crazy and started shouting at her friends. Suddenly her parents came in and they both shouted loudly “ELSAAAAAAAAA”.

Everyone froze except Elsa who knew that she will be grounded for ever.

All her friends ran away because they were afraid from Elsa's Parents. Elsa started apologizing to her parents, but they did not accept the apology until Elsa cleans the mess she created. Finally, they insisted on not giving her an allowance for two months.

Elsa learned her lesson and decided not to ever break her parents' rules.
